In 2011, the Justice Department issued a memorandum stating that it had reinterpreted the Wire Act.

Because of the Federal Wire Act, the vast majority of states did not have any online gambling until 2011.

When New York and Illinois began selling lottery tickets online they wanted to make sure they were not violating any federal laws, so they asked the justice department for some guidance.

Now, there are several states that have opened the door, realizing that there is an opportunity to take advantage of online gambling.

Which States Are Getting Ready To Pass Online Gambling?
