What if, Thomas Hobbes wondered, someone rustled up a second boat out of the discarded planks; would you now have two original vessels? And what about our own era of machine-made duplication - does replication strip away the soul of creation?

I was toting around a delicious, maddening secret: Like a ship remade with identical wood, the bag on my arm had been built on the same plan, with seemingly the same gleaming materials, as the "original.

It was early 2021 when, thrown into sensory overload by grisly pandemic headlines, I found my gaze drifting guiltily to an advertisement in the right margin of a news site, where the model Kaia Gerber arched her arms lovingly around a Celine Triomphe - a plain, itty-bitty rectangular prism that in no universe could possibly be worth, as further research informed me, $2,200. I shut the tab, horrified.

Having grown up a first-generation immigrant whose family's idea of splurging was a monthly dinner at Pizza Hut, I refused to be the type of person who lusted over luxury handbags.

"This led me to a Reddit community of replica enthusiasts, who traded details about "trusted sellers" capable of delivering a Chanel 2.
